INTRODUCTION

OUR FIRST POST-WAR BOOK . . . Michael Nairn & Co. (Australia) Pty. Ltd. feel that in making available this first Pattern Book since 1941, their many friends in the Australian Floor Covering Trade will see in it a determined step toward the objective of freer supplies as well as a useful service in merchandising Australian Linoleums.

DISTINCTIVE PATTERNS . . . When hostilities curtailed production, the resultant restricted output was necessarily reserved for the Fighting and Essential Services which absorbed also many of our personnel, including pattern designers and research people, etc. As our Technical and Design staff returned from Active Service, every facility was applied to minimising the problems of supply, creating new designs and re-creating favoured styles. The result is that a comprehensive range of linoleums is now being produced, as supplies of materials and availability of man-power permits. The illustrations in the following pages show that the range provides grades for all requirements of the Trade, from the most modest domestic floor needs to those of every class of building, public and private. From the No. 2 and No. 3 quality printed linoleums may be selected distinctive patterns that will enhance any interior treatment, be it of conservative inclination or the newest idea in decoration, combining in each case the utilitarian feature of durability with the artistry that is so much emphasised in post-war interior planning.

QUALITY, HYGIENE, RESEARCH . . . While the war curtailed the manufacture of linoleum, many of the problems encountered in maintaining production for the Fighting and Essential Services stimulated certain avenues of research at our Australian Factory, with direct benefits to post-war manufacturing. In evolving new and superior production methods, our laboratory staff played its part in sustaining the high quality which has made the name "Nairn" synonymous with superior linoleums the world over. The antiseptic and aseptic qualities of the oxidised linseed oil incorporated in linoleums are reasons why Nairn Linoleums were in demand for hospitals and clinics of the Fighting Services as well as public institutions during the war. The strong bactericidal action of linoleum is dealt with in the article "Doctor Lino" on page 57. This feature of linoleum alone gives it an unequalled claim for acceptance in interior treatments, especially as so much stress is placed on hygiene in the modern plan for living.

PUBLIC ACCEPTANCE . . . Consumers throughout the world accept the brand "Nairn" as a guarantee of quality and satisfaction. The organisation continues to enjoy its reputation for integrity because, throughout the years, it has scrupulously adhered to its policy of manufacturing consistently high grades of linoleums

"DOCTOR LINO"

TITLE BESTOWED UPON LINOLEUM YEARS AGO.

"In 1924 a prominent South African bacteriologist spread emulsions containing approximately known numbers of live, virulent typhoid bacilli over definite areas of the surface of pieces of plain and inlaid linoleum, and examined these at intervals to see whether the bacilli survived.

"On the first test made with concentration of bacilli of approximately 100,000,000 to a square inch of linoleum surface—a concentration so large as never to be experienced under ordinary conditions outside a laboratory—after 30 hours there was still some living bacilli, but none alive at the expiration of 48 hours.

"A second test was made using concentration of only approximately 30,000 bacilli per square inch of surface—a quantity comparable with what might be experienced in ordinary circumstances. None of the bacilli survived longer than two hours.

" 'I can really speak with confidence founded upon experience when I say the best floor is an ordinary deal floor covered with a really good linoleum, the pattern going right through it,' the late Lord Knutsford reported.

" 'At the London Hospital during the rebuilding of our operating theatre, we had such a floor,' he continued, 'and 3,000 major operations were done over, say, a space of ten feet by six feet. When this temporary theatre was closed, Dr. Bullock, our Bacteriologist, tried in vain to get any culture from the Linoleum.'

" 'If anyone were to give me a million to spend on a Hospital, I would put down in the ward no other floor than wood, covered with Linoleum. It is quiet, warm, easily cleaned, non-absorbent and pleasant for nurses and patients to walk upon, which cannot be said of any other floor.'

" 'It must be a source of great satisfaction to the housewife,' his Lordship concluded, 'to know that the Linoleum that she purchases because of its cleanliness, cheapness, durability and pleasing appearance is also continuously throughout the day, and while the household sleeps, breathing its disinfectant properties into the atmosphere, and insidiously cleansing it of the germs that are lurking in readiness to attack the health of the household.' LINOLEUM MAINTENANCE

Wash as required with ordinary household soap and water, using only as much water at a time as is necessary for cleanliness. Water will not injure the surface of linoleum but may cause damage both to the floor boards and to the back of the cloth if allowed to soak in the joins or at the edges. The use of a scrubbing brush on printed linoleum should be avoided.

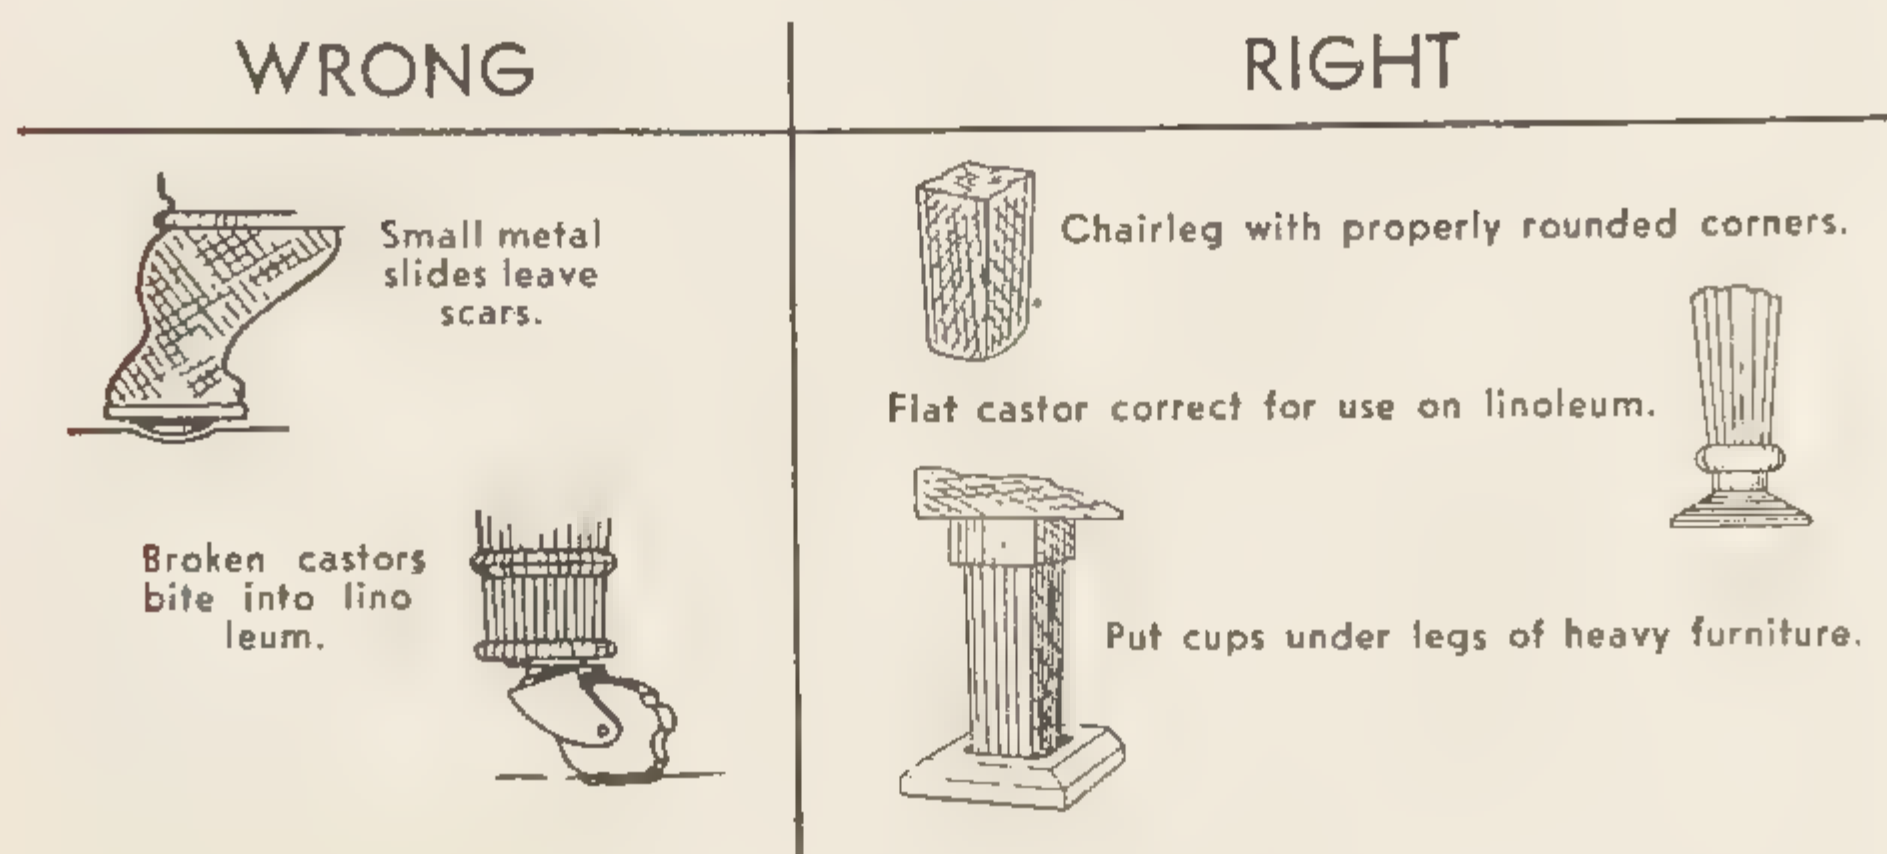

Polishing with an accredited floor polish saves much labour and increases the life of linoleum. The polishing must be done thoroughly at the beginning to give the best labour-saving results. It is recommended to use a little polish (too much would defeat its object by collecting dust) and, after leaving it for a few minutes, rub it dry. If the polishing cloth does not rub easily over the surface, or if it is at all inclined to stick, there is either too much polish or it has not dried sufficiently to give the best results. This is important.

A further application in a week or two will provide a skin that will be easily cleaned with a mop, either dry or damp as may be necessary.

The floor must be clean and dry before applying polish. This, also, is important. Spirit varnish should not be used as a means of surfacing linoleum as it tends to wear patchy in traffic or become white where there is any friction. Floor polish is not so easy to apply, but it gives infinitely better results.

All linoleum tends to become harder and more wear-resisting after a few months of use and exposure to the air. Any little extra care taken during that period will be well repaid.

WARNING—Soaps containing strong alkali are injurious to all linoleum because they tend to soften the material. Even the mildest soap should be used sparingly. Cleaning compounds of the porcelain scouring type contain abrasives harmful to linoleum. They scratch and break the sealed surface, providing lodging for dirt and making subsequent cleaning more difficult. Use furniture cups, large surface castors or pads under heavy furniture. Broken castors and small metal slides groove the floors and permanently scar them. Chair and furniture legs should be flat, smooth and free from sharp edges.
